Change Notification Preferences

We have had some recent requests about how to change trial notification preferences. You can control email and phone notifications via the App. Simply follow the instructions below to select how you receive notifications. A blue switch means 'On' and grey means 'Off'.

If you have set up 'Favourite Apps' you can also control how you receive notifications for these apps by following the steps highlighted below. If you have any questions please contact ClinTrial Refer customer support at: admin@clintrialreferapp.com

To change your general notification preferences, go to the Settings menu and switch them on or off. A blue switch means ON and grey means OFF.

To set specific notifications for each of your favourite apps, go to the Settings menu, click edit and then click on the icon of your favourite app. You may then select your app-specific notification preferences.

Support Concord Cancer Research, Concord Hospital

The Clinical Research Unit at Concord Repatriation General Hospital's Department of Haematology was established in 2005. It is part of Concord Cancer Centre and is now one of the largest, most rapidly growing, Clinical Trials Units in Australia – and the largest clinical research unit for blood cancers in NSW. The trial unit is also a valued member of the ClinTrial Refer community!

They conduct world-leading, patient-centered clinical trials to access and develop innovative therapies to treat patients with Leukaemia, Lymphoma, Myeloma and other blood disorders – cutting-edge research which evaluates the safety and benefits of new medicines.

If you would like to support world-leading blood cancer clinical trials you can purchase a raffle ticket that could also win you one of several prizes including a $5000 visa card. All proceeds go towards providing extra clinical research nurses and medical staff!
